LEAD PAINT DISCRIMINATION: AN ADVISORY FOR TENANTS, LANDLORDS, AND REAL ESTATE PROFESSIONALS

The Massachusetts Attorney General’s Office provides this advisory to tenants, landlords, and real estate professionals to remind them of their rights and obligations under the Massachusetts Lead and Anti-Discrimination Laws.

Lead Paint and Discrimination Against Tenants with Children

Property owners are obligated to abate lead paint hazards in any rental unit occupied by a child under age six. The obligation to remove lead hazards extends to all properties, including owner-occupied properties. Importantly, property owners cannot avoid this obligation by rejecting families with children. It is against Massachusetts law for a landlord or a real estate agent to refuse to rent to someone because he/she has (or is expecting) a child or because the property contains lead.

It is also against the law for a real estate agent or a landlord to refuse to show properties to families with children because the properties may contain lead paint.

Similarly, it is illegal to: (1) steer people away from older properties or towards deleaded properties because they have children; or (2) advertise or otherwise make discriminatory statements that indicate that a landlord prefers tenants without children.

Finally, if a landlord takes an adverse action against a tenant, including evicting the tenant or raising the rent, because he/she complains about lead paint or requests an inspection, that retaliatory action is an independent violation of the law.

History of Lead Paint Discrimination Legislation
The Massachusetts housing stock includes many properties built before 1978, when the use of lead paint was banned because of its harmful effects on the health and development of young children. The Legislature has enacted laws to protect families with children from lead poisoning and housing discrimination. In doing so, the Legislature recognized that no family should have to choose between the health of their child and a place to live.
